The Dish

A posting on the market's Web site (landlmarketbistro.com) touting the daily dinner specials drew us. The owners wrote: "We love takeout pizza as much as the next person. But after a while everyone needs a break."

Hmmm ... sounded intriguing. Change can be good.

We were hooked by the rotating menu, with a nightly selection of two hot entrees, two soups and two side dishes.

We order two French-style steak and frites and cart home our entrees packed in environmentally-friendly heavy-duty paper containers.

The tender, thick fillets are cooked to order and priced by the pound. The dinners ring up at $7.25 and $8.27. The cost includes mounds of lightly salted, tiny, crispy shoestring fries.

As an extra, we can't resist one of the evening's special side dishes: mashed sweet potatoes ($6 a pound). The spuds, infused with a hint of maple, are quickly scooped up.

From the regular menu, we also order a side Greek salad ($4) that is packed in a clear container brimming with lettuce, diced tomatoes, red and green bell peppers, cucumber slices and a generous sprinkling of feta cheese, topped with balsamic dressing. We add Italian bottled water ($1.75) and a diet soda ($1.50) to our order.

With dinner this well-prepared, we'll come back for breakfast and lunch, too.
